Caring hearts BrightStar Care offers a range of home care services

Accredited by the Joint Commission, BrightStar Care is bridging the gap of home care services needed for a growing population of elders, says Ken Fearnow, president and administrator of BrightStar Care.

Not every health care agency is accredited by the Joint Commission, but BrightStar Care operates with this distinction.

"It's an accredidation that hospitals have to have, but very few home care companies would pursue because it's hard work and it's expensive," said Ken Fearnow, president and administrator of BrightStar Care.

In 2013 Fearnow and his wife, Jannie, opened the private non-Medicare franchise agency in Edmond.

"Our slogan is 'A Higher Standard of Care," Fearnow said. "What we hope to do is ensure a higher quality of life."

The Fearnows believe that because of the types of services they provide that it is essential to hold themselves accountable to the highest quality of standards provided ike any good administrator, Brookhaven Extensive Care's Mollie Woolridge is constantly looking for better ways to help her residents.

So when she heard about the Prevent Clinic and what it could do she was sold.

"We always want to give the best care for our residents so anything that's new and can make their lives better or easier we want to try," Wooldridge said. "What they pitched to us was what we needed because readmissions are an issue and these can prevent some. It can at least let us know when someone is declining."

Enter John Murgai and Lee Rose with Prevent Clinic - an on-site health monitoring and management firm that specializes in identifying patients who are at-risk for hospital readmission.

Once those patients are identified, Prevent Clinic focuses on continued monitoring until the patient's prognosis improves.

Patients in the Prevent Clinic - largely those with congestive heart failure - are examined once they begin the program and are then seen weekly.

are at risk and what to look for and they are monitored regularly by additional people," Wooldridge said. "And it's people that learn to know them."

Brookhaven specializes in nursing care. And Dustin Schuler is the Director of Nursing.

From a clinical standpoint, he was all for using Prevent Clinic.

"It was just giving us an extra tool to care for the residents," he said. "For a long time with skilled care you had to send them out to the hospital to get any kind of testing done. It was just a great option to help the residents."

Wooldridge monitored the numbers and liked what she saw. "When did this work? From the very beginning," she said. Prevent Clinic's ultrasounds and dopplers are also at Schuler and his staff's disposal.

"The technology the mobile x-ray has is pretty high-end," he said.

"Once I got the nurses on board 100 percent it was definitely additional peace of mind," he continued. "I think they like it, knowing there's another test they could run. It gives them something else we can go to. They realize sending the resident to the hospital isn't good for them and it isn't good for the family."

Health care reform has pinpointed hospital readmissions as a key area for improving care coordination and achieving potential savings. Medicare patients have the largest share of total readmissions and the highest associated costs for readmission.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, there were approximately 3.3 million adult hospital readmissions in the U.S. in 2011. That resulted in $41.3 billion in additional hospital costs.

For Medicare patients, the No. 1 condition resulting in readmission was congestive heart failure which was responsible for 134,500 readmissions. Septicemia and pneumonia were the next two conditions responsible for the majority of readmissions. These three conditions alone resulted in $4.3 billion in hospital costs.

At a time when hospitals are trying to lower a patient's length of stay, patients are unfortunately coming home sicker than before.

The thinking is that objective hemodynamic data can lead to better outcomes and ultimately a lower cost of care.

"It's an added plus on our side because we do something nobody else does," Wooldridge said.

Initially, Wooldridge admits her staff was leary of taking on a new process. But Murgai quickly won them over.

"Trying new things is always difficult because you don't want to add more work to already overworked people," Wooldridge said. "But I think this helps them in so many different ways. It's not additional work it's additional eyes on our residents. More people can see a decline or an improvement."

Murgai said Brookhaven is the first facility to use Prevent Clinic's optimized program.

"We test every patient here," Murgai said. "Every patient gets that way nothing falls tested through the cracks for them."

And the cracks are where patients can slip through, leading them back to the hospital.

"Hospitals are where sick people are and people get sicker sometimes when they go there," Rose said.

That's why keeping them out of the hospital is the best prescription.

Proposed Bill Close to Commissioner's Heart strike at any time and at any age. A new bill supported by Oklahoma Insurance Commissioner John D. Doak hopes to educate Oklahomans about this condition.

Doak is supporting Michael Morris, a father who lost his teenage son to Sudden Cardiac Arrest. Morris hopes legislative proposals will help educate other parents and save lives. Michael's son, Chase, died suddenly in 2013. His death came as a shock, because Chase was an active 16-year-old athlete with no family history of heart disease.

Commissioner Doak attended the "Play for Chase" Youth Heart Screening event yesterday. Student athletes received blood pressure checks, physicals and an EKG exam for low or no cost. These types of test are not normally part of routine checkups for teenagers. More than 275 students were screened at this event and three had serious heart conditions.

"This is an issue that is close to my family. My daughter has had multiple heart surgeries, and my son is a student athlete," Doak said. "We support this bill 100 percent. I commend the Morris family for all their hard work and dedication to this important cause."

The Chase Morris Sudden

Sudden Cardiac Arrest can Cardiac Arrest Prevention Act will be introduced as proposed legislation in Oklahoma this session.

> "This is the first time in Oklahoma's history that we've had doctors in both the House and the Senate," said Rep. Doug Cox, M.D., who is sponsoring the legislation. "So what better way to introduce our first bill than by using what we do in our real lives to propose legislation that will save young athletes and prevent death."

The bill includes:

The development of educational materials on Sudden Cardiac Arrest for student athletes

➡ A requirement that all student athletes and their parents read the materials and sign a yearly waiver

Guidelines for removing a student who show signs of Sudden Cardiac Arrest during a sporting event and when they can return to athletics

☞ Yearly training course on Sudden Cardiac Arrest for coaches

Penalties for coaches who violate the act

"Chase would be very proud. He was a loving son, and we're taking the tragedy of our son's death and trying to make a difference in the lives of other children," said Morris.

How to Make Your Bathroom Safer

OPINION

Dear Searching,

Because more accidents and injuries happen in the bathroom than any other room in the house, this is a very important room to modify for aging in place. Depending on your mom's needs, here are some tips for each part of the bathroom that can make it safer and easier to use.

Flooring: To avoid slipping, a simple fix is to get non-skid bath rugs for the floors. Or if you want to put in a new floor get slip-resistant tiles, rubber or vinyl flooring, or install wall-towall carpeting.

Lighting: Good lighting is also very important, so install the highest wattage bulbs allowed for your mom's bathroom fixtures, and get a plug-in nightlight that automatically turns on when the room gets dark.

Bathtub/shower: To make bathing safer, purchase a rubber suction-grip mat, or put down adhesive nonskid tape on the tub/

Dear Savvy Senior,

What tips do you recommend for making a bathroom safer and more functional for seniors. My 79-yearold mother slipped and fell getting out of the shower last month, and I'd like to modify her bathroom a bit with some safety features that can help protect her. Searching Daughter shower floor. And have a carpenter install grab bars in and around the tub/shower for support.

If your mom uses a shower curtain, install a screw or boltmounted curtain rod, versus a tension-mounted rod, so that if she loses her balance and grabs the shower curtain the rod won't spring loose.

If your mom has mobility issues or balance problems, get her a shower or bathtub seat so she can bathe from a seated position. In addition, you may also want to get a handheld, adjustableheight showerhead installed that will make washing while sitting down easier.

Another, pricier option is to install a walk-in-bathtub or a prefabricated curbless shower. Walk-in tubs have a door in front that provides a much lower threshold to step over than a standard tub. They also typically have a built-in seat, handrails and a slip resistant bottom, and some have therapeutic spa features with whirlpool water jets and/or bubble massage air jets. Curbless showers have no threshold to step over, and typically come with a built-in seat, grab bars, slip resistant floors and an adjustable handheld showerhead. Prefabricated curbless showers and walk-in-tubs typically cost anywhere between $2,500 and $10,000 installed.

Toilet: Most toilets are about 14 to 16 inches high which can be an issue for many people with arthritis, back, hip or knee problems. To raise the toilet height, which can make sitting down and getting back up a little easier, you can purchase a raised toilet seat that clamps to the toilet bowl, and/or purchase toilet safety rails that sit on each side of the seat for support. Or, you can install an ADA compliant toilet that ranges between 17 and 19 inches high.

Faucets: If your mom has twist handles on the sink, bathtub or shower faucets, replace them with lever handle faucets. They're easier to operate, especially for seniors with arthritis or limited hand strength. Also note that it only takes 130-degree water to scald someone, so turn her hot water heater down to 120 degrees.

Entrance: If your mom needs a wider bathroom entrance to accommodate a walker or wheelchair, install some "swing clear" offset hinges on the door which will widen the doorway an additional two inches.

Emergency assistance: As a safety precaution, purchase a waterproof phone for the bathroom or get a medical alert device (SOS emergency call button) that your mom could wear in case she falls and needs to call for help.

You can find all of the products suggested in this column at either medical supply stores, pharmacies, big-box stores, home improvement stores, hardware and plumbing supply stores as well as online.

—— Bouncer, please remove that songbird from the bar ——

By Greg Schwem

The next time you are traveling through Oregon and spot a zebra finch, or what non-ornithologists call "a bird," it's best to stay away.

The creature may be drunk.

In their attempts to understand the relationship between alcohol and speech impairment, researchers at Oregon Health and Science University recently chose to ply the birds with booze and then record their sounds. Finches were chosen because, according to the study, they "learn song in a manner analogous to how humans learn speech."

I'm not sure why further study on this topic is needed; we need only ask celebrities to explain how alcohol affects one's ability to form words. Mel Gibson, Lindsay Lohan, Paris Hilton and Justin Bieber, please step up to the bar. Still, I read on, despite breaking my cardinal rule to never read medical studies. Doing so requires one to digest sentences such as. "nucleus RA occupies a position in this pathway analogous to the layer 5 motor neurons within the oralmotor and laryngeal representation areas of the human primary motor cortex, which project onto brainstem laryngeal centers for vocal control."

I interpreted that to mean I shouldn't summon security the next time I'm sitting next to an angry fan screaming profanities at a professional sporting event. Instead, I should politely ask him to tone down his brainstem laryngeal center. And then call security.

The birds' initiation into the world of intoxication began slowly; finches were first fed water, then water mixed with white grape juice and finally white grape juice spiked with alcohol. Then the real fun began as the finches entered a studio complete with professional microphones, preamplifiers and recording software. "Singing was recorded and processed with the settings for zebra finch song," researchers wrote.

Would somebody please tell me the proper zebra finch song settings? This was not explained despite an exhaustive description of what to listen for when zebra finches begin singing. There was also no indication of exactly what songs they were singing.

Researchers quickly noticed that alcohol exposure in finches did not affect their general behavior. They were able to perch, stand upright and even fly inside their cages despite being buzzed. It also did not affect their willingness or motivation to sing. So despite the similarities between finches and humans, differences abounded as well. If alcohol did not affect our willingness to sing, karaoke bars would have ceased operation years ago.

However, male finches did noticeably perk up when females were introduced into adjacent cages. The males also suddenly decided they were great dancers. Okay, I made that last one up.

The recording sessions lasted several hours because, as the study points out, "finches clear alcohol quite slowly once high blood ethanol concentration (BEC) levels are achieved."

Who knew?

Also, there was plenty of alcohol to clear because, as researchers sheepishly admitted, the BEC levels could be classified as "risky" drinking with one bird even approaching binge drinking status. After reading the entire study, I reached two conclusions:

I need a zebra finch to clear out all the strange alcohol in my liquor cabinet. How did I end up with a bottle of Crème de Menthe?

I will never look at white grape juice the same way again.

But I also believe further research is needed before concluding people and finches are alike when it comes to alcohol consumption. Oregon researchers, please answer the following questions:

Are male finches inclined to pick fights with bigger, stronger finches after accusing them of looking at their female companions?

Do female finches warble on incessantly about relationships and glumly sing how they may never find "The Right Mr. Finch?"

Do finch couples break up and reconcile repeatedly while drinking?

BrightStar serves the greater Oklahoma City metroplex by offering home care and medical staffing. A full range of services are provided in a client's home, providing that they are well enough to stay at home and don't need to be hospitalized, Fearnow said.

"It might be companionship and keeping people safe in their homes to people who don't need a high level of personal care needs," he said. "They just need safety and some help around the house, maybe light housekeeping and just preparing meals for them and those things."

BrightStar also provides personal care services to people with a higher level of needs. They might have been discharged from the hospital and need some support in their house. Maybe they can't get out of bed and they need help with transferring, walking and showering, Fearnow said.

"We also provide skilled nursing services," Fearnow continued. "That would be anything from providing injections and withdrawing blood all the way to wound care.

BrightStar also provides infusion therapy for certain types of patients.

"We like to hire people who have a heart for the work that they do," Fearnow said. "And it's kind of hard to test for until you get them in the field, but most of the people that are in this business are so because they have a lot of compassion. They really do it more for the satisfaction of helping other people."

The nursing staff ranges from registered nurses to certified home health aides and certified nurse aides. These aides must have been certified for at least a year before BrightStar will consider hiring them.

"We just feel like they need to have some experience either working in a facility or working as a nurse aide before we want to put them with our clients," Fearnow said. "We also require that they have CPR certification."

There are also federal and state requirements for the nurse aides to have a 50-state criminal background check as well as checking the OSBI sex offender registry. They must also have a drug test and a negative tuberculosis test.

"We competency test them in various areas depending on the type of client they are going to see," Fearnow said.

Members of the staff are in the business to enrich people's lives, which is the focus of person centered care.

"They do it more for that than they do for the money," Fearnow explained. "We have some caregivers -- I can think of one in particular -- who with more than one client we've had in their final hours; they've been holding hands and praying with them."

Providing company is important to people who are mostly homebound or transferred with lifts and with varying degrees of disability.

"They require different expertise and different types of care," Fearnow said. "To ensure this better quality of care, we try to match the likes and dislikes of the client with the likes and dislikes of the caregiver."

Clients are contacted within 24 hours for feedback and to see if there is anything else that they need. Seven days later, the client is contacted again, followed by a once-a-month communication with the office. Surveys are sent to learn from the client how they are doing.

"We are in their home with them. We want to see how we are touching them at every stage," Fearnow said.

Enriching the lives of other people by providing excellent care has also enriched Fearnow's life.

"I always said, 'The closer I get to the age of the people I'm caring for -- and we have several that are about my age -- the more important it is for me to provide the quality of care to them and the dignity I would want for myself."

"It's been a very rewarding business for me. My wife and I have enjoyed it very much."

Bettina Trice has dated the sexiest man alive. She's traveled the world, had a world championship whippet and all those things still don't come close to accurately portraying this unique 81-year-old.

Trice started painting when she was four, copying Dick Tracy out of the paper.

She's lived her entire life by the philosophy you're never bored if you're an artist.

In the 1950s, Trice's mother entered her in a beauty contest. The shy Oklahoma City girl made it to the stage but then figured out she had another problem.

"They accepted me and that night I said 'Dear Jesus, what am I going to do. I don't dance and I don't sing," Trice remembers. "He gave me the message of doing art. I sketched the Mona Lisa in three minutes and would you believe I won."

Trice went to Central High School growing up and then

For about a month, when she was still Betty Salmon, she found herself face-to-face with Harry Belafonte – voted at the time the sexiest man alive. She coyly asked for an autograph insisting it was for her sister.

"As I was walking away he asked if I could give him a ride," Trice said. "We dated for over a month."

She still remembers the first date when they went to a local restaurant.

"He said 'I want you to go first because I wouldn't want to embarrass you,"" Trice said. "I took his hand and told him if we couldn't go in together I wasn't going in. We went in and everyone stood up and applauded. Can you believe that in Oklahoma in the 1960s?"

In addition to the artwork that adorns her walls at Emerald Square Assisted Living Center, Trice has vacation photos of her and her husband in China and Italy. She spent a month touring China and visited the Great Wall. She's dined at the luxury Hotel Cipriani in Venice, drinking wine with peaches for breakfast.

Her destinations have also included Japan, Europe and Mexico.

Trice and her husband who owned Trice Electronics had three children and plenty of grandchildren and great grandchildren have followed.

Those who may have dined at Sussy's Italian Restaurant in Oklahoma City may remember the hand-painted mugs owner Jack Sussy used to give out. The Chicago native commissioned Trice to paint some 5,000 cups, each different.

Pop the Cork on the Good Life – Time to Do It Is When You Retire

Nationally Recognized Retirement Expert Offers 3 Simple Tips in 2015 for Improving Retirement Prospects,

About Stephen F. Lovell, MBA, ChFC®, CLU®, CFP®, CFS, BCM, CRPC®, AEP®, RHU®, AIF®

Imagine a bright, golden vista filled with soothing, warm sunshine – perhaps it is California's Highway 29. You're driving this scenic route after crossing the Golden Gate Bridge on a Tuesday during working hours. That's right, you're going to Napa.

Of course, this is precisely the kind of thing you're getting used to doing on Tuesdays – not only because you're becoming a wine connoisseur, but also because Tuesdays no longer belong to hours under the glare of fluorescent lights in front of your work computer. Aah, you're retired.

"That's the dream, and as a native San Franciscan I know it well. I myself have traveled the byways of food and wine in the Bay Area. More Americans could be living their dream during retirement, wherever they go to play," says Stephen F. Lovell, a nationally recognized retirement expert who emphasizes a comprehensive approach for well-being during one's golden years.

"Many baby boomers will retire in the next few years, and for many of them that dream has a nightmarish tinge—they're worried they'll run out of money." Lovell, president of Lovell Wealth Legacy, (www.lovellwealthlegacy.com), says 2015 can and should be the start of 2015 can and should be the start of that good life. He offers three simple ways to bring your dream into reality.

Revise your budget at the do I spend my money? Many of us believe we have a reasonable idea of where we put our money, but unless you account for your spending, you may miss out by not putting away enough for your happy retirement.

A household's discretionary spending on nonessential goods and services like a second smart phone case or the premier movie channel is could top 30 percent. And that is often twice what you intended—but you don't see it until you budget. "Budgeting puts you in the driver's seat," Lovell says. "From there you can control where you spend. You're buying on purpose, and sometimes you get a nice surprise. That alluring vacation is now within reach." • Be proactive about your financial interests before visiting a professional. Knowing which financial products may work best for your personal needs and how to protect your hard-earned money from unnecessary taxation is not what most laypeople excel at. That job is best handled by working with a professional. But, as with your health, you reap the benefits of being aware of your needs and of initiating the process of looking after yourself.

"Remember, 40 percent of retirees underestimate their life expectancy, according to an Ernst & Young study," Lovell says, "so if you don't want to run out of money, create your financial plan to cover this extended retirement period. Then, you odds for a comfortable retirement are improved."

• Consider alternatives to stocks, bonds and cash. Many new investment types have appeared to solve planning and retirement issues. Yet most investors limit their choices by relying exclusively on stocks, bonds and cash. From 2000 to 2013, the stock market, for all its ups and downs, wound up at roughly the same place, around 1527. At a 2 to 3 percent investment cost per year, many investors, for all their efforts, lost money! "I educate my clients by bringing to their attention the wide universe of investment types. Results are that more suitable solutions are uncovered and then applied for the client's benefit."

Stephen F. Lovell is a thoroughly credentialed, nationally recognized financial professional. The Fountains at Canterbury Welcomes New DON

The Fountains at Canterbury, a continuum of care senior living community in Oklahoma City, welcomes a new member to their staff. Kristy Davis is the new director of nursing at The Springs, The Fountains at Canterbury's skilled nursing and rehabilitation center.

Davis has more than 13 years of experience in the health care industry. Previously, Davis has served as a registered nurse in intensive care and rehabilitation settings and as a director of nursing in long-term care.

"My two greatest passions are long-term and senior care," said Kristy Davis, director of nursing at The Fountains at Canterbury. "I love spending time with the elderly and listening to their stories. I am so impressed with the community here and the positive culture and look forward to working with my associates." "We are thrilled to welcome Kristy as a part of our team here at The Fountains," said Scott Steinmetz, executive director of The Fountains at Canterbury. "Her experience and passion for senior care makes her the perfect fit as director of nursing at The Springs. She joins associates enthusiastic about maintaining a thriving community."

The Fountains at Canterbury is dedicated to being the first choice in senior living, providing a continuum of care including independent living, assisted living, memory care, innovative rehabilitation therapies and skilled care. The Fountains at Canterbury is committed to creating an extraordinary community where people thrive. To learn more, please call (405) 381-8165 or go online to www.watermarkcommunities.com.

Seniors don't have to suffer from depression

by Mike Lee, Staff Writer

Working with a generation that has long considered depression something that you simply worked your way out of, Vicki Escajeda and staff at Generations at Integris Southwest Medical Center have their work cut out for them.

Therapist Case Manager Associate Escajeda, BA, has 17 total years with Integris Mental Health. She's seen how depression can take its toll.

The term "major depressive disorder" didn't even appear until the mid-1970s, meaning hundreds of thousands of people have gone untreated for what is now a recognized illness.

Generations is a short-term, inpatient psychiatric program for adults age 55 and older. Generations helps patients: • Understand symptoms

• Explore the causes of their condition

• Learn techniques for reducing stress and managing their response to their illness

Those 55 and older who are battling mental illness or dementia can seek services.

"Even people in long-term care and assisted living settings already dealing in this environment still don't know this exists," Escajeda said. "They may not even know that someone with dementia could be managed by a psychiatrist because the medications, their knowledge of those is so much more updated than even your general practitioners."

The Centers for Disease Control notes that the urgency of the rate of depression to public health is likely compounded by the recognition that – if not effectively treated - depression is likely to lapse into a chronic disease.

Just experiencing one episode of depression places the individual at a 50% risk for experiencing another, with subsequent episodes raising the likelihood of experiencing more episodes in the future.

Depression is characterized by depressed or sad mood, diminished interest in activities which used to be pleasurable, weight gain or loss, psychomotor agitation or retardation, fatigue, inappropriate guilt, difficulties concentrating, as well as recurrent thoughts of death.

But depression is more than a "bad day"; diagnostic criteria established by the American Psychiatric Association dictate that five or more of the above symptoms must be present for a continuous period of at least two weeks.

Generations focuses on patients who have concerns or needs such as:

• Mood disorders such as major depression and bipolar disorder

 Anxiety disorders such as generalized anxiety disorder, panic attacks, obsessive-compulsive disorder and post-traumatic stress disorder other Schizophrenia and psychotic disorders, including hallucinations and delusions

• Alzheimer's and other dementias

• Social role changes and phase of life transitions

• Grief and loss issues

• Substance related and other co-occurring addictive disorders

• Emotional and mental health problems related to other medical conditions

•Medication adjustments

The primary care physician may refer patients directly to the program and can also choose to be a part of the treatment team. All patients are assigned to the care of a board certified or board eligible psychiatrist.

As needed, each patient is

assigned a second physician (family doctor or specialist) whose role is to address any medical concerns while the patient is on the unit.

Escajeda enjoys the fact her patients have an entire hospital of services at their disposal.

"The staff in the whole hospital has been very supportive of this unit," she said.

One of the biggest battles Escajeda and her staff faces is letting seniors know help is available.

"I think it's getting better with the Baby Boomers because there's more openness to that mental-body connections," she said. "Before it was that pull-yourself up by your bootstraps mentality. But I think we're seeing it get better as the population gets older."

Time after time Escajeda has seen what a difference the right care can make.

"Over the years I can think of people who presented like they had advanced Alzheimer's disease and it was something as simply as their thyroid was out of whack or their B12," Escajeda said. "That really pushes for early diagnosis and treatment because there are so many treatable types of dementia. If you start having memory problems it could be depression and we see quite a bit of that. Sometimes people seem confused and they're actually depressed and we can treat that."

Family members are considered to be an important part of the treatment process, and each patient's therapist will schedule family conferences and discharge planning with the family and the patient. Generally, family sessions are once a week. It is recommend that all families participate in family support groups through NAMI (National Alliance on Mental Illness).

Jill Enevoldsen, RN, LCSW wants to get the message out that seniors don't need to suffer needlessly.

"Part of it is that quality of life can be greatly improved," Enevoldsen said of her message to people. "Even if you have dementia with behavioral disturbances if you can get the right treatment, the right medicine, the right family education you can still impact that even if it's a chronic thing," "I think the higher ability to function in your day-to-day life, that's what we're here for."

El Reno Welcomes New ER Department Provider

As a former firefighter and paramedic-turned-nurse practitioner, Antoinette Thompson-Ducasse has always been dedicated to public service and believes her profession chose her.

She brings that dedication to her new role as a nurse practitioner at Mercy Hospital El Reno.

During her 23-year career as a firefighter, Thompson-Ducasse became a paramedic and eventually went on to nursing school where she discovered her deep passion for caring for others.

"I love caring for people, teaching them, being straight with them and everything about it," she said. "I treat people like family with the respect and dignity they deserve. I like to have an open relationship with patients so they know they can trust me since I will listen and care for their needs."

Thompson-Ducasse received her bachelor's degree in nursing from the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center in Oklahoma City, and her master's degree in nursing from the University of South Alabama in Mobile.

For the past several years, Thompson-Ducasse has volunteered at the Royal Family Kids Camp and the Teen Reach Adventure Camp as a camp nurse. For three years, she has also volunteered for the 1040 Initiative where she provides medical care to patients in a village in West Africa.

Grief Support Groups Offered Free program offers help for those recovering from loss of loved ones

If you have experienced the death of a loved one, grief is the normal and natural response to loss. INTEGRIS Hospice provides on-going grief support.

Conducted by certified grief specialist, Marla Mercer Cole, MS, the six-week free evening program provides a step-by-step approach for those who wish to resolve their loss issues and move beyond their grief toward a richer quality of life.

Dates: Feb. 2 through March 9 (Monday evenings) Time: 6:15 to 7:30 p.m. Place: Southwest Christian University, 7210 NW 39th Expressway • Bethany, OK 73008, Room 1 • North Dormitory Building

To enroll: Call 405-603-1708. Programs are free of charge; space limited.

Cole is a licensed professional counselor specializing in the field of grief and loss. As current vice president of Mercer Adams Funeral Service in Bethany, she also directs the aftercare program for families they serve and oversees community relations.

Normal grief responses include appetite loss, difficulty sleeping, feelings of guilt or regret, lack of concentration, mood changes, numbness or crying.

Assisted Living Association announces members listed on Caring.com 2015's Top-Rated

Caring.com is recognizing more than 800 assisted living and memory care communities as part of the online senior care resource and review site's fourth annual "Caring Stars" award program. Eight (8) communities were selected from Oklahoma and Seven (7) of those are members of the Oklahoma Assisted Living Association. They are:

Arbor House - Norman; Bradford Village - Edmond; Copperlake Estates - Edmond; Sterling House West - Oklahoma City; Tamarack - Altus; Ten Oaks - Lawton; and The Parke -Tulsa.

To be considered for Caring Stars 2015, the community had to: receive at least three new consumer reviews between Dec. 1, 2013 and Dec. 1, 2014, including at least one 5-star review: possess a high overall average rating across all reviews on listing; their and have no unresolved negative reviews, to demonstrate responsiveness to online feedback.

"Reviews are more important than vour website," said Caring.com CEO Andy Cohen. "Consumers want to know you're listening. Even responding to positive reviews, not just negative reviews, can go a long way [in establishing a quality lead]." "We congratulate every Caring Star for earning this recognition, and thank the families who shared their feedback in reviews on Caring.com."

Research shows, online reviews have become the first stop for the majority of senior living shoppers. Seventy-three percent of Americans say they would pay more for a community with favorable online reviews, and 82% say they use online reviews as part of their assisted living selection research, according to a recent study by assisted living software review and research company Software Advice.

The Oklahoma Assisted Living Association is proud to have these outstanding communities as their members.

TRAVEL/ENTERTAINMENT Jamaica: More than the Jazz & Blues Festival

hile an excuse is never needed to visit exotic locales, it's advisable to have an anchor activity for your visit. The Jamaica Jazz and Blues Festival near Montego Bay, was my initial reason for revisiting Jamaica. I had been there decades ago with a group of college chums. Other than the palm trees and azure waters and the natural wonder of Dunn River Falls near Ocho Rios, I don't remember much.

The Jamaica Jazz and Blues Festival is a three night event, held this year at the Trelawny outdoor stadium near Montego Bay. The musical line up of acts was impressive, fun and educational. Reggae is not in my lexicon of favorite musical styles, as the first night was all nominal Reggae from local and regional bands

The second and third nights the caliber of musical entertainment well-known with increased performers including: Mariah Carey, Arturo Tappin, Richie Stephens, Peter Cetera, Charlie Wilson, Pointer Sisters and Soja, who were nominated for Best Reggae Album at the 57th Grammy Awards this year. While many expected Carey to be the highlight of the Festival, it was Charlie Wilson and Peter Cetera who earned the adoration of the music fans.

Before and after the evening concerts I visited several Jamaican attractions that offer variety, education and fun. Be sure and plan to visit the restored 1760 Rose Hall plantation house. Here with a personal tour you can step back in time to imagine the lifestyle of a sugarcane plantation owner. The most famous inhabitant was John Palmer's wife, Annee, who turned out to be called the White Witch by her slaves for her cruel treatment, as she murdered a few husbands and herself was killed in the house. It is said she still haunts the house to this day. While the house was in ruin until in 1965, we are thankful it was completely restored to what might have been its glory days.

Chukka Caribbean Adventure Tours (www.chukka.com) offers ATVs, dune buggy rides and Zip lining. It is a safe and enjoyable soft adventure to drive a two person dune buggy through the orchards with majestic views of the distance Jamaican mountains. Zip lining is always an adventure, for no two locales are ever the same. As you sit down into your harness and let go, you never know what jungle vistas will be zipping by. Going through the fork of a large tree, is indeed a thrill. The expert guides at Chukka are to be commended for their skill and attention. Chukka also offers, nature canopy tours, river floating and rum tastings. If you can work into your time, visit the great house. The view from atop this hilltop mansion of the Egg Crate Mountains provides a unique memory.

Over in Ocho Rios, be sure and visit Mystic Mountain (www.rainforestbobsledjamaica.com) with its dry bobsledding ride, Dolphin Cove (www.dolphincovejamaica.com) with its sea life and aviary, and it goes without saying to visit iconic Dunn River Falls (www.dunnsriverja.com). For Jamaican history visit the downtown Montego Bay Cultural Center, by Sam Sharpe square with parking in the rear.

In Montego Bay you may wish to stay at the adults only, all inclusive, upscale Hyatt Zilara hotel (http://rosehall.zilara.hyatt.com) with its extensive pools and palm fringed private beach. While I don't know if it's officially recommended, but with eight all inclusive (no bills) dining locales, where reservation are not taken, your own impromptu progressive dinner could be enjoyed. What a luxury to sample an appetizer here, and entree at another venue and then dessert at another.

Hyatt Zilara offers Brazilian style dinning; Italian, with fresh made oven baked pizzas; an anytime buffet at Horizons, and a favorite of all, the on the beach Jerk stand, with melt in your mouth grilled chicken, port and sausage. Open till 6 pm, a beach side sampling, always hot and ready, is indeed a vacationer's dream. Beach and pool side servers are available to take and deliver your beverage requests. More eating options are also available along with a Crepe stand near the lobby, operating until 2 pm. And don't forget 24 hour room service. At Flavorz, I had a Welsh Rabbit, Sunday Roast with Yorkshire Pudding (a pastry), topped off with Jamaican Fruit Cake which is more like a chocolate mousse cake infused with fruit flavors.

On my first night I was delighted at the service and ambiance of the dress codeenforced Petit Paris restaurant. Stewart, my server was efficient informative, and personable as he served me scallops, a house salad, Steak Frites and an out of this world coconut CrΓËme Brule. I added another perfect martini made from the Stirz bar adjacent to the main lobby. Not many bars in the best resorts can make a proper martini or follow directions, but at the Hyatt Zilara, over several days of enjoyable testing, I found them all accomplished. With an evening beverage in hand while strolling along the balmy ocean surf at dusk, you can create and take in a true lux resort experience.

You need not wait until next year to visit Jamaica during the Jazz and Blues Festival, for as you can see Jamaica has many other attractions around which to center your visit. My thanks to the Jamaica Tourist Board for their assistance, as they can also help you plan your Jamaican visit. (www.visitjamaica.com)

Change for Good Nurse seeks to change hospice market

by Mike Lee Staff Writer

Debra Moore, RN, didn't sleep much the night before.

Her new job as clinical director of Oklahoma Hospice Care is a daunting one and keeps her busy. But the award-winning nurse wouldn't trade it for the world. "I feel like I make a difference," she said, just a few hours removed from sitting up most of the night with a dying patient and their family.

Moore became Oklahoma Hospice Care clinical director near the end of 2014, accepting a staff of more than 10.

"She's just an amazing, charismatic leader," says Jennifer Forrester, RT, community relations director. "People want to follow her and she takes ownership and the magnitude of responsibility for that position."

Moore was the gem Oklahoma Hospice Care had been looking for.

And Moore is a firm believer that Oklahoma Hospice Care is poised for expansion. Oklahoma Hospice Care has offices in Oklahoma City and Shawnee with a radius stretching 50 miles from each office.

She floats the idea of one day having an inpatient hospital.

She's never been one that dares to dream.

"Here I get the best of both worlds," Moore said. "I still get to teach about oncology and I get to take care of patients because I'm not a behind-the-desk clinical director. I feel like the only way you're going to lead something is if you have your hands on it and know what's going on."

Oklahoma Hospice Care is a Christian-principled organization specializing in caring for their patients and the patient's families wherever they call home through personalized plans of care developed with input from the family physician, the hospice physician, the patient, the patient's family and the members of the hospice interdisciplinary team.

Community Relations Representative Tori Aldridge sums up the task at hand nicely. "Families invite us into their lives at their most vulnerable point," Aldridge said. "We get one opportunity to take a tragic situation and make it bearable, even good. We aren't there to focus on a person's death. Instead, we focus on the remainder of their life."

"We don't speed up their disease process and we don't slow it down. We go at their pace and do our best to minimize the surprises. The diagnosis and prognosis have been the most paramount surprises in their lives."

Moore is a native of Oklahoma City. She obtained her nursing degree from Oklahoma City Community College in 1999. She began her nursing career at Presbyterian Hospital in the Med Surgery/Neurological Center and served as RN charge nurse.

Moore spent the next chapter of her career at Midwest Regional compassion that has led her to be the woman and nurse she is today.

With five children and two grandchildren, Moore stays busy even when she's not busy at work.

She exudes happiness. It's hard to ever find her in a down mood. And that's who she looks for when she hires.

"I was looking for caring, compassion and someone who didn't mind hard work," Moore said of the opportunity to hire new staff when she got the job. "I was looking for someone to go into the home when I couldn't be there.

"As far as a clinical perspective you can have all the commercials and advertising you want but word-of-mouth and letting people see what we do, that tells it all right there," she said. "We're different because we all do actually care and that's why I'm glad we handpick our people. We know the people we have working for us."

And that's a comfort for both Moore and her patients.

"I measure success by the patient saying 'job well done,"" Moore said. "It's simple. Being in this field and probably any field it just takes common sense. What would you want done for your mom? What would you want done for your grandmother? Whatever you would want done for them that's what you do for the patient."

And sometimes that means getting a few hours less sleep than she's used to, like the night before.

"I asked (the family member) if we could have done anything else. She said 'Debra, you guys were amazing," Moore said. "That's what keeps us going. I got a couple hours of sleep last night but that's what keeps me going. That's what makes me not even care about sleep. I can wait until Friday."

Winter Coats Available at The Salvation Army Central Oklahoma Area Command

The expectation of this weekend's cold front is reviving the need for a warm winter coat. The Salvation Army has hundreds of winter coats available to keep Oklahoma County residents warm. Oklahoma County residents are invited to pick up a coat beginning today, February 13, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Thanks to the generous donations received from the Brad Edwards' KFOR Warmth 4 Winter Program, our community, and our partners - South Oklahoma City Rotary and Legacy Cleaners - The Salvation Army Central Oklahoma Area Command has an abundance of coats, ready for distribution to help keep Oklahoma County residents in need warm.

"For anyone who needs a winter coat we have one for every size, shape and style. From youth to seniors, we have a coat for everyone that will be sure to keep you warm," said Jessica Smith, Director of Social Services.

The Salvation Army's Social Services is located at 1001 N. Pennsylvania, Oklahoma City, OK 73107 on the east side of the Chesapeake Energy Center of Hope. Individuals can pick up coats beginning today at 2 p.m. Coats will also be available next week:

Monday-Tuesday: 10 a.m. - 12 p.m., 1 p.m. - 4 p.m., Wednesday: 2 p.m. - 4 p.m., Thursday: 10 a.m. - 12 p.m., 1 p.m. - 4 p.m., Friday: 2 p.m. - 4 p.m. (Closed Saturday and Sunday)

Basic eligibility rules for families and/or individuals to qualify for and receive coats from this program require:

1. Picture ID - such as a Driver's License, H.NET ID card, State Issued ID, Governmental or Military ID, or Passport or ID from Country of Origin for ALL adult household members

2. Social Security Card

3. Proof of Residency such as a current utility bill, lease agreement or monthly mortgage statement

For individuals who are homeless, providing their H.NET ID card is sufficient.

For any questions regarding the coat program, please contact our social services office at 405-246-1060.

New Service Aims to Help Oklahomans Find Lost Life Insurance Money can use a new tool from the Oklahoma Insurance Department to find insurance money they may be owed using the Lost Life Policy Locator Service.

The Lost Life Policy Locator Service will help Oklahomans find a life insurance policy or annuity contract left by a deceased loved one. Oklahoma Insurance Commissioner John D. Doak asked his staff to find a way to help Oklahomans get money they are owed and bridge the gap between insurance companies and Oklahomans who think they may be listed as a beneficiary.

"Many times finding life insurance policies can be difficult and time consuming after a loved one's death," said Doak. "But with this new service, consumers can request help from the Oklahoma Insurance Department to simplify the process of locating lost life insurance policies."

After the necessary information is submitted, OID will contact all state-licensed life insurance companies asking them to search their records for any life insurance policies or annuity contracts insuring the decedent. If a policy is found, that insurance company will contact the beneficiary to complete the claim.

Two legislative proposals on this topic have been introduced this session in an effort to protect Starting today, Oklahomans consumers' ability to collect lost policies. Doak is working with legislators to find a solution that best meets the needs of beneficiaries within the confines of the law.

"Commissioner Doak has taken an important step to help Oklahoma citizens claim the life insurance benefits they may be owed," said Rep. Glen Mulready, author of SB 298. "I applaud this effort and I look forward to partnering with him and his team on this issue going forward."

"I'm delighted that the citizens of Oklahoma will now have a process to inquire about family policies that may have been forgotten over the years," said Sen. Gary Stanislawski, Senate author of HB 2066. "I commend Doak Commissioner for developing this innovative solution."

"I applaud Commissioner Doak for implementing a lost policy finder process as an effort to offer protection to consumers. It coincides perfectly with my legislation that will make the consumer whole by requiring the companies to seek out lost or unpaid policies on a go forward basis," Sen. Marty Quinn, author of SB 298.

To learn more about this new service, visit the Lost Life Policy Locator Service on our website or contact the Oklahoma Insurance Department at 1-800-522-0071.
